TRAINING

CHC52015 - Diploma of Community Services

Continue your work in the community sector. Apply for RPL for this qualification today!

How many domestic disputes have you been to as a police officer? How much time have you spent working with people battling with substance abuse issues? How often have you dedicated time to helping members of the community? How many people have you nursed back to health?

This sort of experience is reflective of the CLET CHC52015 Diploma of Community Services. This qualification is available via full RPL and you may well be the person who deserves this sort of recognition. Specifically targeted at police, health sector employees such as nurses and community workers, but also an option for anyone who has experience in the community services sector, apply for recognition of prior learning with CLET today and make your experience count with a nationally recognised qualification.

The CLET CHC52015 Diploma of Community Services is a well-rounded qualification that will demonstrate your experience working with the community and your ability to respond to critical situations, assess the needs of people with mental health issues and issues with alcohol and other drugs, protect victims, work collaboratively with others, and improve the experiences of those less fortunate than most.

The CLET CHC52015 Diploma of Community Services will help you continue this work that you have dedicated so much of your life to, but perhaps in a different sector, or a different context. Take this opportunity to keep helping others, because the community needs people like you.

What about Recognition of Prior Learning (RPL)?

Recognition of prior learning is available on this qualification.

After reading the information provided on this qualification page, if you then decide to apply to have your knowledge and skills recognised towards this and/or other qualifications, you may click on the RPL Assessment button and complete the application form to commence the process.

Click on the following headings to learn more about the CLET recognition of prior learning (RPL) process.

Who is eligible to apply for RPL?

CLET specialises in providing recognition of prior learning (RPL) to people who are current or former police, military, emergency services, nursing and all other government at all levels. WHY? Because that is where our workplace knowledge, experience and education is focused and current.

RPL assessment is obligation free

The RPL assessment process is 'free of charge' and 'obligation free'. You only pay the RPL fee if you wish to be awarded with your qualification/s and receive the certificate/s after the assessment process is complete and you are advised of the result. We do this in recognition of the impeccable work you have done for our community.

When RPL form is submitted

After you complete the RPL Assessment form, evidence to support your knowledge and skills is required. When this is received, CLET staff will commence the initial review of your experience against the criteria of one or more qualifications. On the application form you may elect the qualification/s you wish to be assessed against or ask for a general assessment.

1. The more evidence you provide that is relevant against the qualification/s criteria you wish to be assessed against, the easier it is for CLET staff to be confident you possess the knowledge and skills required.
2. If required, a competency conversation may be conducted over the phone
