NATIONALLY RECOGNISED
TRAINING

PSP50316 - Diploma of Government Security

Government security practices are at the centre of roles in policing, military, corrective services and other key government positions. Have your experience recognised today!

Have you been working in the public sector? Have you been exposed to government security practices as part of your role? Are you responsible for a security and risk environment in the public sector? This is most commonly seen amongst current and former police, military, corrective services officers, detention centre officers, as well as an array of government employees in areas such as DFAT and ASIC. If so, you may be eligible for recognition for the PSP50316 Diploma of Government Security.

Apply for RPL today and the CLET RPL Team will assist you through the process and advise you on options for securing a nationally recognised qualification such as the PSP50316 Diploma of Government Security.

What about Recognition of Prior Learning (RPL)?

Recognition of prior learning is available on this qualification.

After reading the information provided on this qualification page, if you then decide to apply to have your knowledge and skills recognised towards this and/or other qualifications, you may click on the RPL Assessment button and complete the application form to commence the process.

Click on the following headings to learn more about the CLET recognition of prior learning (RPL) process.

Who is eligible to apply for RPL?

CLET specialises in providing recognition of prior learning (RPL) to people who are current or former police, military, emergency services, nursing and all other government at all levels. WHY? Because that is where our workplace knowledge, experience and education is focused and current.

RPL assessment is obligation free

The RPL assessment process is 'free of charge' and 'obligation free'. You only pay the RPL fee if you wish to be awarded with your qualification/s and receive the certificate/s after the assessment process is complete and you are advised of the result. We do this in recognition of the impeccable work you have done for our community.

When RPL form is submitted

After you complete the RPL Assessment form, evidence to support your knowledge and skills is required. When this is received, CLET staff will commence the initial review of your experience against the criteria of one or more qualifications. On the application form you may elect the qualification/s you wish to be assessed against or ask for a general assessment.

1. The more evidence you provide that is relevant against the qualification/s criteria you wish to be assessed against, the easier it is for CLET staff to be confident you possess the knowledge and skills required.
